

Defining Terms

Yours are, it must be stressed, weapons of mass destruction. Ours? In no sense, not at all.

They keep us free, while on the other hand forming what henceforth we propose to call smart hardware ... nope, necessary deterrent.

(That last phrase you'd do well to understand.)

We're world police, the ones who flatten words: our critics are irrelevant or crass.

Let's drop it. Argue if you will for peace but in the end it's strictly for the birds.

You have no say. Split hairs or atoms, we can amply demonstrate what's plain to see – that we have ways of matching lunacy.

The difference between us is self-evident.

Alexis Lykiard